ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Mr. Peter Barron is the Director of the Initiative for Subdistrict Support at the Health Systems Trust in South Africa. His expertise is in the areas of health policy evaluation, nutrition programs, primary health care management, and the control of tuberculosis and sexually transmitted diseases. Mr. Barron holds degrees from the University of Cape Town and Witswatersrand University in business, midwifery, and community health. He has been involved for six years with the South African Health Review, serving as editor in 1997. Among other publications, his articles on a wide range of health topics—e.g., immunization, infant diarrhea, cytological screening for cervical cancer, infant mortality, family planning—have appeared in the South African Medical Journal, the International Journal of Epidemiology, and the Journal of Comprehensive Health. Mr. Barron has worked in rural and urban South Africa, the Philippines, Mexico and (with the World Health Organization), Switzerland.

Dr. Marian Jacobs is Professor of Child Health and Head of the Child Health Unit of the University of Cape Town. She has worked on issues of child rights for more than 10 years with both government and civil society. She chairs the Board of the SA Medical Research Council, and has international experience with research and development institutions in South Asia, Europe, the U.K. and the U.S.A.

Ms. Farieda Khan is currently a Doctoral candidate in the Department of Environmental and Geographical Science at the University of Cape Town (UCT), a consultant in environmental and development matters, and an independent researcher in the field of South African environmental history. She previously has held positions as Researcher and Projects Director of the Environmental Advisory Unit, which offers free environmental advisory research services to poor communities. Ms. Khan holds an M.A. in Environmental Science and a B.A. in English Literature, both from UCT. Her publications include "Public Participation and Environmental Decision-making in South Africa: The Frankdale Environmental Health Project" in The South African Geographical Journal 8: 2 (1998) and "Soil Wars: The Role of the African National Soil Conservation Association in South Africa, 1953–1959" in Environmental History 2: 4 (1997).

Pieter le Roux is Professor of Economics in the Institute for Social Development at the University of the Western Cape. A scholar who has spent a great deal of time studying the relationships between the private and public sectors, and with an eye for meeting basic human needs as well as the imperatives of growth, Dr. le Roux has been a much sought after consultant for the South African postapartheid state.

Dr. Bernard Magubane earned B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Natal, and an M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of California at Los Angeles. He has taught at the University of Zambia, UCLA, and the University of Connecticut, where he retired as Professor Emeritus in 1997. He is currently attached to the Human Sciences Research Council in Pretoria as a Chief Research Specialist. His books include The Political Economy of Race and Class in South Africa (1979); The Ties That Bind: African-Americans and Africa (1987); The Making of a Racist State: British Imperialism and the Union of South Africa (1996); and Toward an African Sociology: Collected Essays (2000).

Dr. M. Crawford Young has been a tenured Professor of Political Science at the University of Wisconsin – Madison since 1969. A distinguished Africanist, he was President of the African Studies Association in 1982 – 83. Young has authored seven books, edited four volumes, and published over eighty-three academic articles. His work has been translated into French, Japanese, and Chinese. Winner of such coveted scholarly accolades as the Woodrow Wilson, the Gregory Luebbert, and the Ralph Bunche prizes of the American Political Science Association, and the Herskovits Award of the African Studies Association, his major works include Politics in the Congo (Princeton, 1965), The Politics of Cultural Pluralism (Wisconsin, 1976), and The African Colonial State in Comparative Perspective (Yale, 1994).

*****

Dr. Franklin Hugh Adler is the DeWitt Wallace Professor of Political Science at Macalester College. He is author of Italian Industrialists from Liberalism to Fascism (Cambridge University Press, 1995) as well as numerous scholarly essays published on both sides of the Atlantic in such journals as American Political Science Review, Journal of Politics, Contemporary Sociology, Ethics, Telos, Les temps modernes, L'homme et la société, Il Ponte, and Patterns of Prejudice. An expert in European politics and social theory, he is currently writing a book about the extreme right in France.

Dr. Kendrick Brown is an Assistant Professor of Psychology at Macalester College. From the University of Michigan, he obtained both his Master's degree in 1996 and Ph.D. in 1998. He currently studies skin tone bias experienced by African Americans and the role of interracial contact for athletic teams.

Dr. Janet Carlson has been a member of the faculty at Macalester College since 1978. She is Associate Professor of Chemistry and Director of the Comparative North American Studies Program (CNAS). CNAS is designed to afford students opportunities to study (1) the intellectual contributions and experiences of historically marginalized racial and ethnic groups and (2) race as a social construction. She teaches "Living on the Edge: The Asian American Experience." Her current research includes a study of the Japanese Americans who were not incarcerated during World War II.

Dr. Beth Cleary is Associate Professor of Dramatic Arts and Dance. Her research interests are in feminist theater and performance, critical race studies and performance, and American political theater. She has published articles and performance reviews in Theatre Survey, New England Theatre Journal, and Theatre Journal. She is currently working on two book-length projects, one on playwright Naomi Wallace and the other, with Peter Rachleff, on the Buffalo Historical Marionettes. She directs one show per year at Macalester; her most recent production involved thirty students in three plays by Adrienne Kennedy.

Dr. Duchess Harris is an Assistant Professor of African-American Studies and Political Science at Macalester College. She joined the faculty after completing a Research Fellowship at the Institute on Race and Poverty at the University of Minnesota Law School. Her interest is 20th Century African American political history, specifically the organizations of the Civil Rights movement, the contributions of women of color to feminist theory, autobiography, and critical legal studies. A recent publication is "Expanding Women's Opportunities: Black Participation on the President's Commission on the Status of Women," Journal of Intergroup Relations 25, no. 1 (Spring 1998).

Dr. Roberto N. (Bert) Ifill, who emigrated from Barbados, received his A.B. from Dartmouth College and his Ph.D. in economics from Yale University. He has taught Economics at Williams College and served in the Dean's Office for two years, including being the Dean of Freshmen. He was a program officer at the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, specializing in grant programs in support of liberal arts institutions and research in the economics of higher education. He returned to the campus in 1993, taking a number of positions at Connecticut College. Since 1997, Bert has served as an Assistant to the President at Macalester College. His primary responsibilities include: overseeing and coordinating College efforts to achieve campus diversity, developing diversity plans, working closely with senior staff on programs of recruitment and retention, and assisting efforts to build stronger links between College and local communities.

Dr. David C. Itzkowitz is Professor of History at Macalester College. He is the author of Peculiar Privilege: A Social History of English Foxhunting, 1753–1885, and articles on gambling, Anglo-Jewry, and freedom of religion.

Dr. Leola Johnson is Assistant Professor of Communication Studies at Macalester College. She focuses her research on representations of blackness in American popular culture. Her most recent work is on representations of black criminality in pulp fiction and rap music. She is working on a book about the role of the pimp in hip hop culture called "Un(w)rapping Gangstas."

Dr. David A. Lanegran, a Macalester College faculty member since 1969, is the John S. Holl Professor of Geography specializing in urban issues and development. He has conducted extensive comparative research on urban planning around the world and has published and spoken widely on urban and cultural geography. He has been a driving force in Macalester's nationally recognized programs to improve the teaching of geography in elementary and secondary schools. In 1999, he established a million-dollar endowment to support K – 12 geography educators in Minnesota. He received the College's Jefferson Award recognizing outstanding teaching, and the Burlington-Northern Award for Teaching Excellence. He was named one of the nation's ten outstanding geography teachers by Change magazine in 1977.

Dr. David Chioni Moore is Assistant Professor of International Studies and English at Macalester College, where he works on issues both African and transnational. He has published in Transition, Research in African Literatures, PMLA, the Journal of Anthropological Research, and numerous other venues. He is currently co-editing volumes on the "Black Athena" controversies, and of Langston Hughes' 1930s writings on Soviet Central Asia.

Dr. Peter Rachleff has taught U.S. History at Macalester College since 1982, where he now holds the rank of Professor and served as Chairperson from 1997–2000. He is the author of Black Labor in Richmond, Virginia, 1865–1890 (University of Illinois Press, 1989) and Hard-Pressed in the Heartland: The Hormel Strike and the Future of the Labor Movement (South End Press, 1993) and he has contributed essays to half a dozen labor history collections.

Dr. A. Truman Schwartz, DeWitt Wallace Professor of Chemistry, has taught at Macalester College for 34 years. His primary professional interests are science education, the history of chemistry, and the physical chemistry of proteins. He is author or coauthor of several university-level chemistry textbooks and numerous papers. His contributions to the teaching of chemistry have been recognized by nine local, regional, and national awards.

Dr. Vasant A. Sukhatme is the Edward J. Noble Professor and Chair of Economics at Macalester College, where he has taught since 1978. His teaching portfolio consists of courses in microeconomics and economic development; he also regularly offers a course on the economics of Adam Smith and Karl Marx. He has collaborated to teach interdisciplinary courses on world food and hunger problems, economic justice, and the immigrant experience in America. He has published articles on price policy for agriculture in India and the economics of foreign aid. He has also written on the economics of baseball.

Dr. James von Geldern is Director of Humanities and Cultural Studies and Professor of German and Russian at Macalester College. He is the author of Bolshevik Festivals, 1917–1920 (University of California Press, 1993), a study of how elaborate socialist festivals helped build a new political culture in the U.S.S.R. He co-edited two complementary anthologies of popular culture, Mass Culture in Soviet Russia: Tales, Poems, Songs, Movies, Plays and Folklore, 1917–1953 (1995) and Entertaining Tsarist Russia: Urban Entertainments, 1798 – 1917 (1998), both published by Indiana University Press.