ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This issue of Macalester International owes a debt to a few critical individuals. Among them are, of course, the authors of the essays and the respondents. Without exception, each of them took her/his assignment to heart and delivered it on time. In this context, we must single out Professor Edward W. Said, who accepted our invitation in the midst of extraordinary demands on him. Said's dramatic entrance into the Weyerhaeuser Chapel, the venue for the International Roundtable, captured for us an unforgettable moment — a combination of the fragility of the body and the strength of the intellect. Also, our gratitude goes to three of our students — Consuelo Gutierrez, Christopher Herman, and Nicole Palasz. They helped in a variety of ways, including tracking down endnotes.

We bid farewell to Dr. Robert M. Gavin, Jr., who is stepping down from the Presidency of Macalester College at the end of this academic year. Because of his commitment to internationalism, we dedicate this volume to him. Finally, we extend our welcome to our new President, Dr. Michael S. McPherson, and look forward to working with him in furthering internationalism at the College.