The DeWitt Wallace Library preserves all Honors Projects in digital form, and provides access in order to promote Macalester scholarship and better serve the scholarly community. Honors Projects are:

- available on-site via appointment in the College Archives;
- cataloged in OCLC WorldCat, discoverable in Google Scholar, and shared through interlibrary loan; and
- made available in DigitalCommons@Macalester digitalcommons.macalester.edu.

  DigitalCommons is Macalester's open access institutional repository and permanent archive for works produced by Macalester students, faculty, and staff. Materials in DigitalCommons are searchable via Google Scholar and other search engines, and are freely accessible to the world. However, you retain any and all copyright you may have to your material, which protects against unauthorized reproduction of your content. Some departments restrict honors work that is part of continuing research. In these cases, the Honors Project is limited to on-campus computer access only and will not be shared through interlibrary loan.

I have read the above and:

- I AGREE to make my Honors Project openly available to the Macalester College and larger scholarly communities through our permanent repository DigitalCommons@Macalester or its successor technology.
