

5-4-2009

About the Authors

Follow this and additional works at: <http://digitalcommons.macalester.edu/maccivicf>

Recommended Citation

(2007) "About the Authors," Macalester Civic Forum: Vol. 1: Iss. 1, Article 4.
Available at: <http://digitalcommons.macalester.edu/maccivicf/vol1/iss1/4>

This Front Matter is brought to you for free and open access by the Institute for Global Citizenship at DigitalCommons@Macalester College. It has been accepted for inclusion in Macalester Civic Forum by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@Macalester College. For more information, please contact scholarpub@macalester.edu.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Seyla Benhabib is the Eugene Meyer Professor of Political Science and Philosophy at Yale University and Director of its Program in Ethics, Politics and Economics. She is the author of Critique, Norm and Utopia: A Study of the Normative Foundations of Critical Theory (1986); Situating the Self: Gender, Community and Postmodernism in Contemporary Ethics (1992, winner of the National Educational Association's best book of the year award); together with Judith Butler, Drucilla Cornell and Nancy Fraser, Feminism as Critique (1994); The Reluctant Modernism of Hannah Arendt (1996, reissued in 2002); The Claims of Culture: Equality and Diversity in the Global Era (2002); The Rights of Others: Aliens, Citizens and Residents (2004, which won the Ralph Bunche award of the American Political Science Association in 2005 and the North American Society for Social Philosophy award in 2004); and most recently, Another Cosmopolitanism: Hospitality, Sovereignty and Democratic Iterations, with responses by Jeremy Waldron, Bonnie Honig and Will Kymlicka (2006).

Dr. Benhabib has been a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences since 1996 and has held the Gauss Lectures (Princeton, 1998); the Spinoza Chair for Distinguished Visitors (Amsterdam, 2001); the John Seeley Memorial Lectures (Cambridge, 2002); the Tanner Lectures (Berkeley, 2004); and she was the Catedra Ferrater Mora Distinguished Professor in Girona, Spain (Summer 2005). Furthermore, she received an honorary degree from the Humanistic University in Utrecht in 2004.

Professor Benhabib was the President of the Eastern Division of the American Philosophical Association in 2006–07, and now serves on its Executive Committee.

The Rev. Dr. Lucy Forster-Smith has served Macalester College as its Chaplain since 1994. She received her Bachelor of Arts degree from Sioux Falls College, South Dakota, in 1975, with an interdisciplinary major in music and philosophy. In 1979, she graduated from Princeton Theological Seminary with a Master of Divinity degree and was ordained as a Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) minister in 1980. In 2001, she completed her Doctor of Ministry degree at Princeton Theological Seminary with a dissertation entitled, "A Grammar of Transformation: Language Used by Non-Religiously Affiliated College Students in Describing Life Changing Experiences."

Civic Forum 2007

Prior to joining Macalester, Rev. Forster-Smith served on campuses in Washington state, Wisconsin, and Ohio. She is the author of numerous articles in journals, including Theology Today, The Presbyterian Outlook, and Church and Society, as well as religious educational resources published by Westminster/John Knox Press. In addition to her responsibilities as Chaplain, Rev. Forster-Smith serves as Co-Director of Macalester's Lilly Project for Vocation and Ethical Leadership, which is a program of the Institute for Global Citizenship.

David Theo Goldberg directs the system-wide University of California Humanities Research Institute (www.uchri.org). He is also Professor of Comparative Literature and Criminology, Law and Society, as well as a Fellow at the Critical Theory Institute, University of California, Irvine. He has authored several books, including The Racial State (2002) and Racist Culture: Philosophy and the Politics of Meaning (1993). He has also edited or co-edited many books, including Anatomy of Racism (1990), Multiculturalism: A Critical Reader (1995), Between Law and Culture (2001), Relocating Postcolonialism (2002), and The Companion to Gender Studies (2004). His current monograph, The Threat of Race, will be published by Basil Blackwell.

Dr. Goldberg is the co-founder and co-leader of the Humanities, Arts, Science and Technology Advanced Collaboratory (HASTAC, at www.hastac.org), which is a global consortium of eighty institutions committed to the development, application, and analysis of digital technologies in, for, and by scholars in the humanities, arts, and social sciences, in collaboration with technologists, engineers, and computational scientists.

Andrew Latham is an Associate Professor of Political Science and Associate Dean of the Institute for Global Citizenship at Macalester College. He came to Macalester after completing a post-doc at the York Centre for International and Security Studies, where he also served as Assistant Director. He earned an M.A. from Queen's University and a Ph.D. from York University, both in Toronto, Canada. He has received a number of fellowships, awards, and grants, including two Military and Strategic Studies Doctoral Fellowships from the Canadian Department of National Defence, and an award for teaching excellence at the University of Manitoba. Latham specializes in the field of international security and has published in journals such as European Journal of International Relations, International Journal, and Contemporary Security Policy.

About the Authors

Carly Martin '07 majored in Philosophy, with a minor in Women's, Gender and Sexuality Studies. She will pursue graduate work in Philosophy after completing a yearlong English teaching assistantship in Metz, France. Ms. Martin also devotes her time to feminist organizing. During her senior year at Macalester, she collaborated with others to rehabilitate and re-open the Women's and Gender Resource Center on campus.

Diane P. Michelfelder, Provost of Macalester College, received her A.B. degree from Bryn Mawr College and her Ph.D. in Philosophy from the University of Texas at Austin. A philosopher with a special interest in ethics, aesthetics, and the philosophy of technology, she is the co-editor of Applied Ethics in American Society and Dialogue and Deconstruction: The Gadamer-Derrida Encounter, which was named one of the "Outstanding Philosophy Books of the Year" by Choice magazine. Her essays, reviews and translations have been widely published in books and journals, including the Journal of Social Philosophy; Rethinking Nature: Essays in Environmental Philosophy, Ethics and Information Technology; and Readings in the Philosophy of Technology. Prior to her appointment at Macalester, Michelfelder served as Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Indiana State University. Previously, she served as Professor of Philosophy and Chair of the Philosophy Department at California Polytechnic State University and as Professor of Philosophy and Department Head in Languages and Philosophy at Utah State University. She is currently the President for the Society for Philosophy and Technology.

Jane Rhodes is Dean for the Study of Race and Ethnicity and Professor and Chair of American Studies at Macalester College. She earned a Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina–Chapel Hill. Rhodes specializes in the study of race and mass media, the black press, media and social movements, and cultural studies. Prior to joining the Macalester faculty, Rhodes was an Ethnic Studies professor at the University of California, San Diego. Rhodes' award-winning first book, published in 1998, is Mary Ann Shadd Cary: The Black Press and Protest in the Nineteenth Century. Her new book, Framing the Black Panthers: The Spectacular Rise of a Black Power Icon, was published in Fall 2007. Rhodes was featured in the award-winning documentary The Black Press: Soldiers Without Swords (California Newsreel), and was the recipient of a President's Postdoctoral Fellowship from the University of California and a Ford Foundation Postdoctoral Fellowship for Minorities.

Civic Forum 2007

Brian C. Rosenberg is the 16th president of Macalester College. He began his duties on August 4, 2003. Prior to becoming president, Rosenberg was the dean of the faculty and a professor of English at Lawrence University in Appleton, Wisconsin, a position he held since 1998. Rosenberg began his academic career as an adjunct assistant professor of humanities at The Cooper Union in New York City in 1982. From 1983 to 1998, he chaired the English Department at Allegheny College in Meadville, Pennsylvania.

A scholar of Charles Dickens, Rosenberg has written numerous articles on the Victorian author and other subjects as well as two books, Mary Lee Settle's Beulah Quintet: The Price of Freedom (1991) and Little Dorrit's Shadows: Character and Contradiction in Dickens (1996). He was elected to the board of trustees of The Dickens Society in 2000.

A native of New York City, Rosenberg received his B.A. degree from Cornell University and his M.A. and Ph.D. in English from Columbia University.

Ahmed I. Samatar, with an undergraduate degree from the University of Wisconsin (La Crosse) and a doctorate from the University of Denver, is the James Wallace Professor of International Studies and the Dean of the Institute for Global Citizenship at Macalester College. Professor Samatar, whose expertise is in the areas of global political economy, political and social theory, and African development, is the author/editor of five books and more than thirty articles, including The State in Africa: Reconsiderations. He is the founding editor-in-chief of Bildhaan, the first international journal of Somali Studies, as well as editor of twenty volumes of Macalester International, a publication of undergraduate education and internationalism. A Fulbright Fellow, he has been awarded grants by the Ford Foundation, the Mellon Foundation, the United States Institute for Peace, the Heinrich Böll Foundation, and the St. Paul Foundation. His current research is a collaborative two-volume work on leadership and the Somali experience.

Desirée Weber '07 earned a B.A. degree in Political Science from Macalester College.

x