ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Our sincere appreciation is extended to my colleague Professor David Chioni Moore at International Studies, who, as Acting Director, assumed the final supervision of the last stages of the organization of the Roundtable as well as introduced the lead presentation and the schedule of events. I left for sabbatical leave and East Africa in early August confident that David was at the helm. Second, our gratitude goes to our colleagues in the Women's and Gender Studies reading group for making many splendid suggestions. Here, we single out Professors Beth Cleary, who proposed the name of our keynote speaker/author, and Anna Meigs and Sonita Sarker. A special thanks is also directed to students Erica Kaster and Zachary Dunn and our colleagues in the International Center, particularly Janice Dickinson, who made themselves available to assist in the production of the Roundtable. As always, we are grateful for the perceptive and accurate work of the staff at College Relations.

The Macalester International Roundtable, an intellectual festival convened each October, is an occasion for serious conversations across the College on topics of transnational significance. The practice is to commission a set of essays—a keynote address, followed by four additional essays delivered by seasoned scholars—which become the center of debate and discussion. Each of the four essays receives public response from a Macalester student and a member of the faculty. The purposes of the Roundtable are to cogitate together upon crucial but difficult global questions and to cultivate further the equipoise that minds of the Macalester academic community have long been expected to hold between local anxieties and transnational pressures.
