CONTRIBUTORS

Karin Aguilar-San Juan is an urban sociologist who teaches interdisciplinary courses in American Studies at Macalester College. “Schools and Prisons: Dismantling the Pipeline” is an upper-level undergraduate seminar that combines a reflective, practical internship experience with critical theory and writing. She is a board member of Amicus, a non-profit organization that helps ex-offenders and communities in transition. Her books include The State of Asian America: Activism and Resistance in the 1990s (with Jaimes and Hwang, 1994); Dragon Ladies: Asian American Feminists Breathe Fire (with Shah and Kochiyama, 1999); and Little Saigons: Staying Vietnamese in America (2009).

Westenley (Wes) Alcenat ’10 was born in Haiti and immigrated to the United States at 10 years old, growing up in Minneapolis. At Macalester College, he earned a B.A. in History and Political Science. During his junior year, Wes participated in a study abroad program in Geneva, Switzerland, where he conducted a research project into the racial challenges of new immigrants. He then joined a summer seminar at the University of Pennsylvania under the auspices of the Society for the History of the Early American Republic (SHEAR)-Mellon Foundation, where he researched representations of Haiti in antebellum Black newspapers. When the earthquake hit Haiti, Wes led fund-raising efforts at Macalester, including a night of spoken word poetry and solo performances, which raised some $20,000. Wes was selected as a recipient of the Presidential Leadership Award and the Global Citizenship Award. Chosen as the class speaker for commencement, his speech was titled, “A New Kind of Leadership.” He has been admitted to Columbia University's Ph.D. program in History.

Ian F. Haney López is the John H. Boalt Professor of Law at the University of California, Berkeley, where he teaches in the areas of race and constitutional law. He has published groundbreaking books on the social and specifically legal construction of race. Racism on Trial: The Chicano Fight for Justice (2003) documents how police violence not only radicalized but racialized Mexican-American activists during the late 1960s. White by Law: The Legal Construction of Race (1996, rev. 2006) details judicial efforts to interpret the “white person” prerequisite in place in U.S. naturalization law until 1952. His numerous articles have appeared in such journals as the Stanford Law Review, Yale Law Journal, California Law Review, and Pennsylvania Law Review. His work has also been featured in more than two-dozen anthologies and encyclopedias, and he has published opinion pieces in the New York Times, Los Angeles Times, and San Francisco Chronicle. Haney López started his teaching career at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, and he has been a visiting professor at Yale and Harvard law schools, and was a Rockefeller Fellow in Law and Humanities at Stanford University.

Callie Thuma ’10 is an American Studies major and a Geography minor. Her hometown is Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. At Macalester, she worked closely with the Department of Multicultural Life as a Cultural House staff member, a co-facilitator for the White Identity Collective, and a member of the Women's History Month planning committee. She also ran for the Women's cross-country and track teams. Callie received a Lilly Summer Fellowship in 2008 to learn about and participate in community organizing with the West Side Citizens' Organization in Saint Paul. She spent the spring of her junior year in Flecheiras, Ceará (northeast Brazil), where she studied community-based tourism and youth cultural organizing. In 2010, she was awarded a Presidential Leadership Award and a Lealtad-Suzuki Center Award recognizing her service to the Department of Multicultural Life. After graduation she will teach elementary special education at ARISE Academy in the Upper Ninth Ward of New Orleans as a Teach for America corps member.