CONFERENCE PLANNING DIGEST

Members of the Association are urged to use this regular space in the newsletter to organize a panel or convey other news that would be of interest to the membership. Individuals wishing to participate on a panel with an already designated theme should contact the organizer.

The Conference Committee’s task is to initiate and coordinate Himalayas-oriented panels at annual meetings of the major professional organizations in all major disciplines represented by the Nepal Studies Association membership. The more strongly identifiable the presence of Nepal and Himalayan studies is at such conferences, the greater will be the impact of our work as a collective body rather than as isolated individual efforts.

I would like to thank those who have already made our recent efforts a success and urge NSA members to take a leadership role in setting the intellectual agenda of Himalayan studies.

The Anthropology of Nepal: People, Problems and Processes

Prof. Michael Allen, Dept. of Anthropology,
University of Sydney, New South Wales, 2006, Australia; Phone: 692-2360; Fax 692-4203.

Paper Abstracts to appear in Volume 12 of HRB.

Panel Topics:

The Anthropology of Resource Management - (Convenor Dr. Ram B. Chhetri, Tribhuvan University, and Robert Fisher. University of Western Sydney, Hawkesbury)

In recent years the management of natural resources, especially forest resources has been an important theme in the anthropology of Nepal. Anthropologists have contributed to resource management through studies of indigenous knowledge of forest and other resources and studies of resource use. More recently there has been an increased concern with the control and management of resource use, especially through local organisations.

Increasingly anthropologists have become involved in policy formation and in the design and implementation of projects concerned with resource management, especially in the community forestry program.

This session is aimed at researchers and practitioners involved in anthropological and sociological aspects of resource management in Nepal. It should be of interest to non-anthropologists, especially sociologists and geographers, as well as to anthropologists.

It is envisaged that the session will include papers on locals systems of forest management, grazing land livestock management as well as papers dealing with the implementation of resource management projects.

Women and Development - (Convenor Ms. Indra Ban, Dilli Bazaar)

Contributors to this session are invited to consider both the part played by women in development projects in Nepal and the various ways in which such projects impinge on the social lives of women. Issues examined will include the gender implications of rural development projects, the impact of industrialization on the social position of urban women, women and changing health practices, the media and gender stereotypes, etc.

Medical Anthropology - (Convenor Dr. Peter Webster, University of Wellington)

Medical Anthropology has loomed large in recent research in Nepal with scholars, both local and overseas, examining such topics as indigenous systems of diagnosis and healing, the social consequences of the introduction of western medical practices, the relationship between religious belief and bodily health, etc. Contributors to this session will pay particular attention to the politics of competitive health practices in both rural and urban contexts.

Urbanism in Nepal - (Convenors Dr. Alex Kondos, University of New South Wales and Mr. Ananda Shrestha, Tribhuvan University)

Urbanism is a rapidly increasing feature of Nepalese social life and in this session contributors will examine some of the key features of both its traditional and new forms. The emphasis throughout will be on a distinctively anthropological contribution to the understanding of problems of urban living, that is to say, an understanding based primarily on prolonged fieldwork in small face-to-face communities. While some papers may be essentially of a descriptive nature.
It is envisaged that most of them will also deal with a range of empirical and theoretical issues concerning Nepalese urban life. Papers will cover such topics as: communalism, urban semiotics, urban conflicts, urban lifestyles, industrialization and poverty.

The State and the People - (Convenor Dr. Vivienne Kondos, The University of Sydney)

The panel will address theoretical and empirical questions dealing with state - subject relations. These may cover issues like: nationalism, ethnicity, bureaucratic processes, the "democratic movement" and changes impelled by the revolution of 1990.
