NOTE

As the editors of its official publication, we urge you to participate in the growth of the Nepal Studies Association and this bulletin in two ways. The Bulletin can only be as good as its readers: we rely upon your input to maintain the Bulletin's vitality as a medium of scholarly exchange. We not only invite, but implore you to submit materials for publication, including articles and suggestions for topical themes for future issues. Secondly, let us know of others who have an interest in the Himalayan region but who are not currently members of the association. Our readership is expanding, but we must expand further in order to achieve our objectives of regularly publishing research articles and increasing the stature of the bulletin.

Please note that membership dues have increased slightly for 1989. We thank those members who have already renewed for 1989 at the previous rate. We request that those who have yet to renew their membership or wish to join the association take note of the new rates and remit membership dues accordingly. This modest increase reflects rising publication costs and is consistent with our goal of making the Nepal Studies Association self-sufficient with respect to the cost of producing this journal.
